Based on rules, regulations and state statutes, all intrastate telecommunication providers must obtain a Certificate of Public Convenience and Necessity prior to operating within Nebraska. Nebraska Revised Statutes, Section 86-805 (Reissue 1994) and Section 75-604 (Reissue 1996), state that the Commission may issue a certificate authorizing any telecommunication company to offer and provide interLATA and intraLATA interexchange services. These statutes go on to provide that no person, firm, partnership, limited liability company, corporation, cooperative or association shall offer any telecommunications services without first making an application for and receiving from the Commission a Certificate of Public Convenience and Necessity.

Telco Partners, Inc. filed an application with the Commission seeking a Certificate of Public Convenience and Necessity to operate within the state of Nebraska on January 27, 1997.

On March 5, 1997, the applicant was notified by phone that Telco Partners' application was missing financial information required to assess the applicant's financial fitness. Furthermore, the applicant was informed that a business plan, projecting the applicant's future income and break even point, was required before the Commission would schedule a hearing.

Again on March 28, and April 1, 1997, the applicant was contacted requesting the necessary financial information. Other attempts were made orally and in writing requesting the information, yet at this time no financial information has been submitted.
